Intro

The recent enlargement to new Member States and the new Treaty establishing "A Constitution for Europe" are challenging steps forward in the development of the European Union.

Such developments, together with the achievement of a single market, require a new approach to human resources development. Today, all those aspiring to top positions, be it in the industry or in services, need to be well versed in EU legal proceedings, in the regulations and procedures of single market, as well as in means to access EU resources.

The University Institute of European Studies and the Centre for Studies on Federalism, supported by Compagnia di San Paolo, has launched a new training programme on European economic law and competition: "Law and Business in Europe".

This Course, organised under the auspices of the University of Turin, the Representation in Italy of the European Commission and the European Training Foundation, aims at providing young graduates with specific and practical competencies on EU regulations and markets, including competition and regional policies.

Contents and methodology

The programme is designed as an intensive workshop, combining theoretical and practical approaches. Intensive training based on problem-solving approach is what makes the Course unique. The programme comprises roughly 40 training days (including lectures, case studies, performance-oriented exercises and interaction with resource persons, tutors and fellow participants).

The programme has been designed to provide specific competencies in the field of European economic law, business and competition, such as:

- European Governance (European institutions and policies, economic freedoms, external policies).
- Competition (antitrust, multilateral relations, state aids, public procurement, public utilities, intellectual properties).
- Enterprises (European company law, EU Small and Medium Size Enterprises (SMEs) policies, financial transparency, customer protection, tax law, e-commerce, information society).
- European Financial Support (structural funds, European programmes and regional policy, EU projects).

Participants will be also exposed to the following subjects areas:

- EU sites and data bases.
- EU recruitment procedures: the multiple choice formats to assess candidates competencies.

Assessment of participants' performance will occur during the Course through case studies, practical exercises and tests.
